

Tourist Vineyards in the North and Midlands

NORTHERN VINEYARDS TO VISIT

Vineyards have spread ever northwards. At one time in the 1960's, Renishaw was listed as the most northerly in the world! Now, there are vineyards just about everywhere in England apart from Lancashire, Durham and Northumbria, and these will no doubt appear with climate change. The vineyards are well worth a visit as part of a day out, and some of the wines beat anything available at the same price in supermarkets - and you can taste them first! Several produce sparkling wines that are far more interesting than imported equivalents. Some vineyards have shops, but those shown in yellow on the map would appreciate a phone call first as they may not have an on-site shop or may lack full facilities- see their websites before visiting. A selection of places to visit in conjunction with a vineyard tour are included. Enjoy!
